

The delegations of racing "fans" from Washington, Baltimore, New York and other Eastern cities will be on hand to root for their favorite drivers. The race will be under the auspices of the Quaker City Motor Club, with the cooperation of the municipal authorities of Philadelphia. The course will be the same as in former races—that known as the West Park course. The circuit is eight miles around, and the race will be twenty-five times over the course, making a 200-mile contest.

There is probably no course in the country which is more thrilling as a motor speedway than the one in Fairmount Park, because of its many hairpin turns and steep grades. With all its dangerous features, it is an interesting fact that there is no course of its kind on which automobile speed contests have been held, which have been attended with less mishaps to cars, drivers, and spectators. The three former races run over this circuit, were run without a single accident of any significance.

The strict regulations in the interest of safeguarding the people, as well as the contestants, will be enforced. An immense grandstand has been erected at the finish and directly opposite the big score board, where the timing of the finish line at the end of each lap will be marked on the crossing of the finish line at the end of each lap. An electrical timing apparatus will be used, and telephone stations will be established all along the course, placing the race officials in direct communication with every feature of the contest. John E. Reayburn, mayor of Philadelphia, will be honorary referee.

Irish business is reported by Miller Brothers, who handle the Ford in this city. Among the sales of Ford cars made this week were machines for Dr. Paul Freble, Mrs. A. M. Decker, and E. F. Morgan.

With E. H. Duff leading the way, a number of owners of Chalmers cars left today for Philadelphia to witness the Fairmount Park road race tomorrow. Owing to the poor condition of the roads between Havre de Grace and Philadelphia, it was decided to make the trip via Baltimore, York, and Lancaster. Among those in the party are Mayor H. G. Cole, Dr. L. S. Green, Frederick Barbour, F. C. Ebbald, Paul Flynn, H. Hargland, George Allen, Edgar Orme, Joseph Gullit, Charles J. Walker, and George Allen.

Troops To Act Only When Canal Is In Danger

The United States will not intervene in Panama unless it becomes absolutely necessary to do so for the protection of the canal. This is stated today with positiveness in connection with the explanation that the Tenth Regiment of Infantry was hurried to Panama on account of the political unrest in the republic.

While neither the State nor the War Department will confirm the report that the presence of troops on the isthmus is necessary to safeguard American interests and to make the lives and property of the citizens of the new republic safe, circumstances in connection with the dispatch of troops to the zone point to that fact.

MOTOR ROAD RACE EXPECTED TO DRAW AN IMMENSE CROWD

Fourth Annual Event In Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, Tomorrow.

Oldfield Withdraws

Lee Oldfield will not drive in the Fairmount Park automobile race tomorrow. Owing to the criticism directed at him because of the fatal accident at Syracuse, where he killed eleven people when his car crashed through the fence, Oldfield decided to withdraw from the event. He was engaged to pilot a 90-horsepower foreign car owned by a Philadelphia motorist, and in the drawing for position at the start he drew No. 1. When he appeared for practice he heard a number of criticisms, and became so unnerved that he decided to withdraw. His absence from the race leaves eighteen cars to face the starter tomorrow.

Kensington Citizens Organize Association

Kensington citizens have organized an improvement association. Joseph W. Buck was chosen president of the new organization, George H. Snyder is treasurer, and Lewis Mariani is secretary. Permanent standing committees will be appointed at the next meeting.

The first matter to be considered by the organization is the proposed macadam road connecting Kensington and Rock Creek Park. This project will receive the fullest support from the Kensington citizens.

Dr. William L. Lewis briefly outlined a general plan of the Department of Agriculture to make Montgomery county a model to demonstrate the possibilities of modern rural life.

David Westenhaven Is Victim Of Apoplexy

David Westenhaven, eighty-one years old, of Berkeley county, W. Va., died at his home, near Martinsburg, yesterday morning, from a stroke of apoplexy.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning from the family residence on Arden road, near Martinsburg, and interment will be in the Catholic Cemetery of St. Joseph's Church.

Mr. Westenhaven survived by five sons and two daughters.

"Jack" Lowrie Arrested; Accused By Friend

When Policeman McOsker went to 224 1st street northwest this morning to serve a warrant on Jack Lowrie, he was surprised to find that "Jack" was a woman.

Taken to the station house, Mrs. Lowrie insisted that "Jack" was the name by which she was known to her friends, and she declined to give any other information.

She is accused of assault by Mrs. Ida Bullman, a former friend.

Attitude of Workers

A wholesale hardware merchant said although he and other business men are satisfied with Taft, he realized the President had lost favor to some extent with the working people. He thought Mr. Taft would regain popularity with the employed classes if he should succeed in getting the tariff reduced.

"I was for Taft in 1908, and will be again," said F. D. Weed, a real estate dealer. "It is my opinion, and the opinion of most of those with whom I come in contact, that Taft did the best that could be done on the tariff and will continue to do so."

The proprietor of a shoe store said Taft didn't "seem to be strong," but thought he was as good as the average President.

"My opinion is that Taft could not be improved on as a President," said Mr. Barlow, president of the United States National Bank.

A trunk manufacturer said he and others with whom he had talked were inclined to regard the President as a good deal misunderstood, particularly with reference to the tariff. He thought the President's tariff board plan ought to have a fair trial before the people give their final verdict on the Taft Administration.

The head salesman of the Nebraska Clothing Store is a progressive Republican. He thought "Taft is running the country to suit the rich," and favored La Follette or Cummins.

The correspondent encountered a gang of workmen employed in the Omaha Packing Company plant. Inquiry disclosed that most of them were Democrats and a few were Socialists. Three of those who professed to be Republicans were against Taft and one was undecided.

Complains of Cost of Living.

"Taft ain't doing nothing for the country, has he?" demanded one of the Republicans. "It takes more money to buy things to wear and eat than it used to, but wages ain't gone up."

The undecided Republican said it might be a good plan to change the party in power if the Democrats put up a good man. He had no favorite.

"Taft hasn't got any backbone," said a baker. "What good does it do to fine the sugar trust? You and I are paying the fine, ain't we? Fining trusts don't do no good, they just raise the price and the public pays. What we want is a President that will put 'em behind the bars."

Japanese Student Hurt In Cycle-Motor Crash

Racing down Q street on a bicycle to get to school before 9 o'clock this morning, Sakai Kaitoku, a Japanese, who is a member of the third-year class at Central High School, crashed headfirst into an automobile at the corner of Seventeenth street northwest, and was badly hurt about the head.

It was thought at first that Kaitoku's skull had been fractured, but at the Emergency Hospital, where he was carried in the automobile, it was found that he was suffering from concussion and severe lacerations.

Kaitoku gave his age as thirty-three and his address as 222 Massachusetts avenue northwest. He said he came to this country several years ago as a student.

But, after all, though this point was interesting, it was incidental, and not what the man in the automobile was looking for. He must have come in an automobile, for men do not walk around the country in such attire. But Miss Gardiner, who was in the library, saw him from a distance, and she had seen no one enter the grounds.

"Come in," she called, and he came from a distance, and she had seen no one enter the grounds.

"How had he gained entrance?" she asked. "The servants had not let him in. He couldn't have come in by the front door without being seen. The conservatory door was always locked at night. Oh, well, while all these things were going on, I was sitting in the library, and he might have entered and slipped upstairs unseen. Then he could have gone out on the balcony through the balcony door and reached the library window."

Or, he might have climbed to the balcony by means of a veranda pillar. An agile man could easily do this—still, not so easily if dressed in a bulky automobile coat.

It was mysterious enough, but, of course, the first thing to do was to look for traces. If I had only known sooner that the man was in the library, I could have looked for him there. I should have had of finding him!

But there was no time to cry over lost chances. I started at once to look carefully at the veranda pillars. There I found myself forestalled by Mr. Hunt and Gilbert Crane were already examining them.

"Any scratches?" said I.

"Plenty of old ones," said Mr. Hunt, "but none that seem to have been made as recently as last night."

"How about automobile tracks?" "There are any number of those all over the drive; but as several people came in automobiles last night, they mean nothing definite."

"What do you make of those marks on the balcony floor that look as if made by scuffing feet?"

"They may be the marks of a scuff," said Mr. Hunt, "or it may be that some one stood for some time looking in at the library window. A nervous person standing there might move about in a manner to leave just such traces."

For some unaccountable reason these

The bathroom should be given a daily cleaning and weekly scrubbing. Nothing is better than a solution made by dissolving Gold Dust washing powder in water. Approved By Business Men.

Enough Republicans were found, however, to make it possible to gauge the attitude of the community toward the President and his Administration. The result of the canvass shows the business men of the city overwhelmingly approve the stand of the President on the tariff, trusts, reciprocity, and conservation.

In South Omaha, however, in the heart of the packing-house district, the showing is different. There the majority of the small shopkeepers and workmen interviewed were either against the President or lukewarm. The chief complaint against the President in that section of the city was that he seemed to

PEOPLE OF OMAHA DIVIDED ON TAFT

Business Men Seem To Approve President's Attitude On Tariff And Trusts, But Workers Disapprove His Administration.

The Chicago Tribune, in an endeavor to analyze the impression that President Taft is making on the communities he visits, and in which he speaks, has detailed a special correspondent to follow in the wake of Mr. Taft's speech-making tour and interview representatives of various classes as to the effect on the public mind of his presence and utterances. It is the aim that these dispatches shall be absolutely unbiased, and they are prepared from and based upon indiscreet interviews.

The Times reproduces the dispatch from Omaha, Neb.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 2.—On account of the disarrangement of his schedule by the Missouri washouts, President Taft did not get much of an opportunity to convert Republican insurgents in this city and vicinity.

When he arrived the big audience in Omaha auditorium, which he was to have addressed on world peace, had been dissipated, and as it turned out, his only public utterances during his stay in the city was directed to a gathering of school children. The disappointment of the people generally in being unable to greet the Chief Magistrate of the Republic and hear his views of national questions was apparent today. After waiting for hours, the thousands who looked to the auditorium were reluctantly to leave so long as there was any chance of the President arriving in time to deliver his address. The indications are that had the program been carried out, the President would have received one of the most enthusiastic receptions of his trip through the country.

Good Showing for Taft.

THE TIMES DAILY SERIAL STORY THE MAXWELL MYSTERY

By CAROLYN WELLS (Copyright, 1911, The Frank A. Munsey Co.)

Synopsis of Chapters Already Published

Peter King was invited to a house party at the home of Philip Maxwell and upon his arrival there he was surprised to see his friend looking harassed and worried. Inquiry proved that Philip had had trouble with a rival for the hand of Miss Mildred Leslie. On the same evening King heard this news Maxwell was found dead, slain through the heart and Miss Leslie wounded, also by a pistol shot.

At first it was thought that the two were the only parties interested in the shooting and an investigation was abandoned. But when Miss Leslie was found to speak last testimony that Philip's last words were "He shot me," led to a determination to probe the matter.

At the coroner's inquest it was established that two shots had been fired at 10 o'clock. The inquest also brought out a discrepancy in Miss Gardiner's testimony that was unnoticed by anyone present save Peter King.

MISS LESLIE—No, except that he said something had occurred a week or so ago, which had entirely changed his future, and which, he believed, would make me consent to marry him.

Mr. Billings—How did you receive this suggestion?

Miss Leslie—Only laughed at him and made some foolish remark. And then he said, "Don't trifle with me to-night, Mildred; I am desperate."

At this point I started, for it was the very speech I had overheard Philip make as I passed through the hall. I glanced at Irene. She was calm, but her clenched hands and set lips revealed how deeply this story moved her. To her jealous temperament it was nothing short of torture. The reading went on:

Mr. Billings—Did you then become more serious?

Miss Leslie—Not I, I never was serious with Philip. The only way to make him love me was to make him afraid of me. He kept on begging me to listen to him, and I kept on telling him that I would. I saw him look toward the window.

Mr. Billings—One moment, where were you?

tomorrow clothes—a big coat, a cap with visor and goggles which covered most of his face.

Mr. Billings—Not the lower part of his face?

Miss Leslie—No, but his large collar was turned up and buttoned in a way to hide his mouth and chin.

Mr. Billings—Would you recognize him if you saw him again?

Miss Leslie—Think not; the clothes were not peculiar in any way. Just such as all men wear when automobiling.

Mr. Billings—Was it a fur coat?

Miss Leslie—No, not that kind. A sort of thick cloth, I think, of medium color, but rather lighter than dark.

"That is all, gentlemen," said Mr. Billings, addressing the jury at the close of his reading.

I felt as if I must get away to think things over by myself.

I rushed from the room and out on the veranda, where I found a secluded corner.

Just sort of a story had Mildred told, and why?

For the doctor had sworn she was perfectly sane and rational, and quite capable of describing the affair.

Why, then, did she say she threw an inkstand full of ink and a bronze horse at the intruder when I had so carefully searched the room for clues, found no traces of ink, and, moreover, I especially remembered seeing that bronze horse on the desk when I first entered the library, after Gilbert Crane had given the alarm.

CHAPTER VII.

Red Ink and a Horse of Bronze.

NOT for a moment did I doubt Mildred's good faith in the matter. It would be too absurd to think of her making such statements if they were not true. And yet how could they be true? How could anyone throw an inkstand full of ink and not leave black spots somewhere? How could anyone throw a heavy bronze paperweight, and, being shot a moment later, restore the bronze to its place on the desk?

Clearly she must be laboring under an hallucination regarding these things.

CASCARETS CLEANSE LIVER AND BOWELS

No Biliousness, Headache, Sick, Sour Stomach, Indigestion, Coated Tongue or Constipation.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret tonight will give you a thorough cleansing inside and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.
